Our 2019 Conference, Food Matters to Grey Matter: The Gut-Brain Connection: A Holistic Approach to Treatment and Prevention, has generated great interest and we expect a robust turnout of Aging Life Care Managers® and other health care providers from NY and across the country. It will be held at the conveniently located NYU Kimmel Center on November 6, 2019 from 8:30am to 6:30pm, including a dedicated networking opportunity at our NY ALCA open bar cocktail party, conveniently located less than a block away at Amity Hall.

The conference is designed to explore the contributing factors to cognitive impairment and the role our environment and gut play into our health and wellbeing. Care managers and eldercare professionals will learn best practices which they can incorporate into their work to optimize compassionate care for this vulnerable population and their families. Plan to join us on November 6. We appreciate your participation!

Who attends the NYALCA Annual Conferences?

Attendees include over 200 professionals who provide a wide range of services throughout the United States, with a concentration in the tri-state region. These services can include assessments, developing plans of care, coordination and recommendation of services, counseling, home care, psychotherapy, placement and guardianship to the rapidly growing senior population and their families. The NYALCA conference is a unique educational and networking opportunity for professionals who work directly with seniors and their families, as well as those who are interested in learning more about aging issues and solutions. Who sponsors and exhibits at the NYALCA Annual Conferences?

Companies and organizations whose products and services are geared toward assisting the elderly, their families, and the aging life care managers who represent them are encouraged to exhibit. Attendees will have access to cutting edge leaders and decision-makers in the forefront of aging and elder care concerns. Past exhibitors, sponsors and attendees have been delighted with the caliber of topics, exhibits and referrals received from attending NYALCA Conferences. Sponsors and exhibitors consistently remark that their presence at the NYALCA conferences improve their access and visibility within the professional community and has led to increased knowledge of and use of their services.
